

Thanks for being such an attentive and responsive audience at the MEMO session on nonfiction books Friday afternoon, October 13. I apologize for not bringing enough handouts, but I hope you will be able to print out a copy for your use. The information on the first page relates to finding award-winning and notable books each year. The other three pages are the books I talked about during the session. Many of them are reviewed in the October issue of Book Notes. You can find all the issues at the CCYAB website www.lib.mnsu.edu/collections/ccyab/

I hope that many of you will make a trip to visit the Center for Children's and Young Adult Books. If you or other media specialists or teachers in your district would like to meet with me, just call or send an e-mail message to arrange a time. Of course, you're always free to browse on your own. You can come to the CCYAB any time the library is open.

Let me explain once again that the books given away at the session were overstocks sent to the CCYAB by Galde Press. The books have no connection with the information that I presented. They aren't even nonfiction!
